Roosevelt Faces Threat of Losing the Empire State

Upstate New York Farmers Failed to Benefit From the Triple-A

TAMMANY HAS KEY

But an Aroused People May Rout Politicians and "Go" for F. D.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent
NEW YORK—It is almost axiomatic in politics that the presidential candidate who carries New York state wins the national election. The exception was Charles Evans Hughes, who carried New York, but lost the 1916 race by a few thousand votes. Certain reasons exist for believing that loss of the state might not be fatal to Roosevelt this year—reasons which can be discussed separately. Two months before election, however, it can be reported that top Republican leaders are fairly sure Governor Landon will take the Empire State with its 47 electoral votes in November and that Democratic leaders are privately admitting that the odds seem slightly against the president.

Whatever happens, there will be a great battle in New York this fall. This is the home of some of the most colorful popular leaders of our time and they will be in it up to the neck—Roosevelt himself, the one and only Al Smith, peppery little Mayor LaGuardia, picturesque ex-Mayor Jimmy Walker, "Big Jim" Farley, Governor Lehman, and many others.

Update Heavily G. O. P.
Republicans expect a plurality of several hundred thousand votes upstate, where farmers—who benefited little from AAA—are heavily anti-New Deal.

As usual in New York elections, the question was whether the large plurality the Democratic candidate is sure to roll up in New York City is enough to wipe out the adverse vote upstate. Roosevelt carried the state by 600,000 votes in 1932. Lehman won by 800,000 in 1934. These are large leads for the G. O. P. to wipe out.

But it is customary in New York to believe that upstate pluralities cannot be beaten unless Tammany Hall makes a vigorous effort to get out its full vote. This year most of the Tammany leaders are sour on Roosevelt and Farley. Especially on Farley, since they feel he wants to control their organization as part of his national machine.

They also suspect Roosevelt is going to support Mayor LaGuardia for re-election in 1937.

In addition to the Tammany complication, the Roosevelt candidacy is up against such hindrances as the opposition of Al Smith and Father Coughlin—both of whom have personal followings—the return of many repentant Republicans to the fold, and the turning of a large group of middle-class Democrats from Roosevelt.

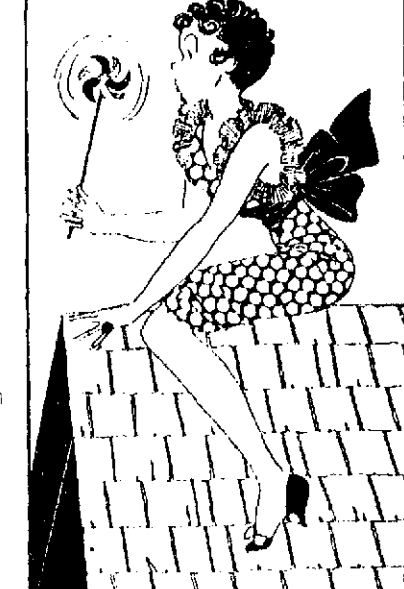

This group is vaguely guessed by G. O. P. dopesters to number around 100,000.

No Smith Aid for Lehman
Lehman is running again at Roosevelt.

Spain's Ex-King Behind Them, the Rebel Leaders Say

Fascist Rebels Win Aerial Combat—Declare Madrid Is "Desperate"

PACT AGAINST WAR

Soviet Russia Proposes Reform in League of Nations Structure

By the Associated Press
The Spanish rebels won an aerial battle above the Franco-Spanish frontier Friday, disclosed that the former Bourbon dynasty figures in their plans for Spain, and declared that Madrid's defenders were reduced to desperation.

The insurgents, radio broadcasts, vehicles of most of the Spanish Fascists' news and propaganda in the past six weeks of conflict, pictured Madrid Friday as the scene of a perpetual night of terror, with hundreds of persons being shot down and food supplies running low.

A Proposal Against War
GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—Soviet Russia proposed Friday night a bold scheme of League of Nations reform which would force almost immediate military sanctions against any nation making war.

Russia recommended adoption by the League assembly of a special protocol by which the League council would be summoned within three days in the event of war.

Lecture on Peace at Gordon Sunday

Rev. Pat Patterson to Address Hope, Prescott, Gordon Rotarians

The Rev. Pat Patterson, Rotarian and pastor of the First Christian church of Stuttgart, will give a sermon-lecture at Gordon Sunday night at 7:30 at an open air meeting at the Presbyterian church.

The Rev. Mr. Patterson was the 62nd Rotary District's official delegate to the International Peace Conference recently held at Nashville, Tenn. His Gordon subject will be, "Thoughts of the Peace Conference."

Hope, Prescott and Arkadelphia Rotarians and their wives and friends will join the Gordon Rotarians and the churches of Gordon in this meeting. All the churches of Gordon have cancelled their services to join in this service.

Automobile Death Rate on Increase

Cities, Which Had Been Safer Than Country, Reverse Their Trend

CHICAGO.—(AP)—A warning that the nation was headed for another all-time "record of slaughter" on its highways was sounded Thursday by the National Safety Council as it released figures showing July to be the third successive month with more fatalities than corresponding periods last year. There were 3,180 traffic deaths last year, 3 per cent more than the 3,050 recorded for July, 1935.

July's total brought the aggregate for the seven months of the year to 18,560. This was only 2 per cent under the aggregate of 18,980 for the same period in 1935, a year in which motor deaths reached an all-time high mark at 37,000.

"The trend is alarming," commented W. H. Cameron, managing director of the council, "because we have yet to pass through those months which in former years produced the largest number of traffic accidents deaths."

"In 1935 the first six months recorded 15,890 traffic fatalities while in the first six 21,110 such deaths were suffered," Cameron said, "an increased traffic volume probably contributed to the mounting figures for 1936. He said that gasoline consumption was 9 per cent above 1935's in the first five months of this year."

Reversing a trend of the earlier part of the year, cities which had led rural areas in reducing fatalities, reported an increase of 11 per cent during July.

Fuente, Col., with a population of 50,000, was the largest city to complete the first seven months without a traffic death. For July, Birmingham, Ala., was the largest with a similar showing.

Kiwanis Club to Reorganize Here

Stonequist and England Tender Their Resignations as Officers

The Hope Kiwanis club, meeting at Hotel Barlow Thursday night, adopted a resolution to re-organize following the resignation of A. E. Stonequist, president, and Wayne H. England, vice-president.

Reorganization plans were discussed. Edwin Shortess of Kiwanis International came here from Chicago to aid the club in its plans for reorganization and to direct a membership drive.

At the opening of the meeting, Mr. Stonequist took the floor and asked to be relieved of his duties as president. He was followed by Wayne H. England.

Both said they felt their acts were for the best interest of the club. No new officers were elected Thursday night, the club adopting a motion to meet at a later date and select new officials.

Hearst Declared to Be G. O. P. Boss

Secretary Ickes Discloses Publisher's "Caution" to Gov. Landon

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes said in a campaign speech Thursday night that William Randolph Hearst is "the new Republican boss" and that sworn court testimony showed the publisher had cautioned Gov. Alf M. Landon "against talking too much."

"A word of caution from that source was all that Governor Landon needed," Ickes added.

Ickes utilized evidence he said was given in the Illinois courts last July by George F. Harding, newly-elected Republican national committeeman for Illinois, in discussing what he called "the relationship existing between Governor Landon and Mr. Hearst."

Certified copies of the transcript were distributed.

The secretary said that a memorandum presented in the court case as from Hearst to Harding, read:

"I was very much impressed by what you had to say about Governor Landon not making too many speeches. If you will write me to that effect expressing your views as frankly as you did when you were talking I will, with your permission, send the letter to Governor Landon. It co-operates with and supports what I have already told the governor, and I feel that such views coming from such an important man as yourself would have a great and valuable influence."

"I think the governor naturally feels this himself but the average politician around him is continually urging him to get out and talk. This is the method of the average politician, but as you very truly said, this is a campaign in which speech-making might do more harm than good."

"At present the Democrats have nothing to criticize Governor Landon about. You can see that in their attempt to criticize him. Too many speeches might give the Democrats their eagerly wanted opportunity. Others try to combat or at least try to offset the influence of those politicians who are continually demanding more speeches."

Bailey, Futrell in Relief Agreement

Additional $300,000 Provided for Pensions, Without Legislature

LITTLE ROCK.—Governor Futrell, Attorney General Carl E. Bailey and State Comptroller Griffin Smith agreed Thursday that an additional $300,000 can be made available from the general revenue sales tax fund for state relief and welfare purposes without additional legislation.

The agreement was reached at a fourth relief conference at the attorney general's office, with the governor, Mr. Smith, Senator Joe T. Robinson, Floyd Sharp, state WPA administrator, and C. H. Andrews, state welfare commissioner, attending.

Mr. Bailey, Democratic nominee for governor, said he concurred in the belief of Comptroller Smith that money in the general revenue fund could be transferred to the charities fund to replace deficiencies accumulated in that fund over several years, thus releasing $300,000 a year authorized to be transferred from the welfare fund to the charities fund. This $300,000 would be matched with federal money, making $600,000 available for welfare and old age pension purposes.

The attorney general said he would withhold issuance of a formal opinion until after an additional conference Tuesday, which the Executive Committee of the Welfare Commission will be asked to attend.

Mr. Bailey said that he is confident that the Welfare Department would co-operate in the matter, but that he wanted to guard against increasing pension and unemployment relief allowances to a point that cannot be maintained through the winter.

He said that adoption of the Nyberg amendment, which would prevent the 1937 legislature from re-enacting the sales tax law or any other tax measure without submitting the question to a vote of the people, would leave the state without funds for pensions and welfare purposes for several months while a new tax measure was being submitted.

He expressed belief that the Nyberg proposal will not be adopted at the general election in November, since both he and Secretary of State Ed F. McDonald, runner-up in the gubernatorial race, opposed the measure during the campaign.

The object of the conference was to determine whether the state can provide approximately $10,000 a month for administrative expenses of county welfare boards to make investigations in the drought-stricken counties to determine those in need of relief.

School Sept. 21st for Washington

Faculty Unchanged Except for Norvel Kelly, Athletic Coach

The 1936-37 session of the Washington High School will start Monday, September 21, it was announced this week by the Washington school board.

This is about one week later the opening date set for most of the other schools in the Washington area.

The faculty will be the same as last year with the exception of Norvel Kelly, who has resigned to accept the principalship at Altheimer.

The faculty: Mrs. C. C. Stuart, principal; Miss Kathryn Holt and Miss Julia Bearden, high school assistants; Miss Mary Catts and Mrs. L. L. Pilkinton, primary and grammar grades.

The school buses will be driven by P. Q. Lovell and John Velvin, the school board announced.

Economic Topic Is Outlined to Rotary

E. F. McFaddin and A. Albrighton Address Local Club Friday Noon

A joint program taken from the Rotarian magazine was delivered before Hope Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow by E. F. McFaddin and A. Albrighton.

Mr. McFaddin based his discussion on an article by Alvin Maceaulay, president of the Packard Motor company, entitled, "People Will Spend—If," in which the automobile maker scouted the idea that people can be compelled to spend money in order to bring back prosperity.

Mr. Maceaulay's article was equally forcible in support of a local chamber of commerce, a watermelon festival, and all the other community activities which go to make Hope an attractive city to the tourist or other visitor here.

Mr. Albrighton spoke on vocational fellowship.

Guests Friday were: Chase G. Stephens, of Gordon, who extended an invitation to Hope Rotarians to hear a lecture on world peace at Gordon Sunday night; Dave Ryan, ably of Gordon; and young Jack Blakely of Hugo, Okla., who was a guest of Terrell Cornelius.

Kidnap 7 Persons While Obtaining a Change in Cars

Officers Concentrate in Area West of Texarkana for Chase

ABANDON OLD CAR

Seize Farmer's Truck, Then Young People's Car, and Reach DeKalb

TEXARKANA.—(AP)—Sheriff J. W. Geer, of Red River county, Texas, announced Friday that the three escaped convicts from the Arkansas penal farm at Cummins had been traced to east Texas, where seven persons were temporarily abducted during the night.

Geer advised local authorities that the car in which the convicts fled from Cummins farm was found abandoned early Friday at Paris, Texas, after the trio had effected a change in machines by kidnapping two separate groups of motorists.

Texas officers and state rangers from Texas and Arkansas concentrated in the area to pursue the convicts.

The three fugitives, reported heavily armed, appeared at the home of Claude Hudson, near Paris, forced Mr. and Mrs. Hudson and their son, 5 years old, into Hudson's truck, and ordered him to drive toward Clarksville.

Near Clarksville they forced a sedan in which four young people were riding to halt, and directed the four into the back seat while the men drove toward DeKalb.

Washington Cage Coach Is Leaving

Norvel W. Kelly Takes Position on Altheimer School Faculty

Norvel W. Kelly, athletic coach and science instructor at Washington High School for the past three years, has resigned to accept a position with Altheimer High School, near Pine Bluff.

Mr. Kelly had been re-elected by the Washington school board for the fourth consecutive term. His resignation leaves a vacancy that has not been filled.

In resigning, Mr. Kelly said that he felt that he was being promoted. He will be principal and athletic coach at Altheimer.

Relief Budget Is Upset by Drouth

Adding of 1/2 Million Farm Families to Relief Creates Problem

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—The drouth that loomed off the corn crop probably has saddled congress with making a new relief appropriation almost as soon as it is organized next January.

When the last congress set up $1,425,000,000 for relief, it was the intent to make it carry over mostly on a work-relief basis, until July 1, 1937. But, with the drouth, came estimates by the resettlement administration that 500,000 farm families would be added to the relief rolls over the winter.

That is almost one-fourth the 2,231,117 employed by the works progress administration at mid-summer and one-sixth as many as were employed at last winter's peak of 3,038,973.

Since less than two months of the fiscal year have elapsed, there is little to show how the appropriation was holding out before the drouth struck. Debate in congress indicated the estimates for unemployment relief were cut fairly close—probably close enough to prevent stretching the fund 15 to 25 per cent to care for 500,000 drouth stricken families, about 2,000,000 persons.

The mathematics of relief is simple. If the drouth load is to be absorbed, it will shorten the time that the $1,425,000,000 will stand and so put upon congress the burden of adding enough to finish out the year. Various agencies have estimated $100,000,000 as a minimum necessary to tide farmers over to another crop.

But administration of the fund is not so simple. Congress divided the latest appropriation among certain classes of projects, not all of which are adaptable to the central drouth area.

Resettlement vs. WPA
The problem revolves the old controversy between work relief and direct grants, often called the dore. Harry

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

Figures from various parts of the United States seem to show that alcoholism is becoming more frequent than it was during prohibition and that, as a result, there are more cases of delirium tremens in hospitals than there used to be. Doctors, therefore, are giving increasing attention to methods of controlling the condition. Few people realize how carefully doctors have to distinguish between ordinary drunkenness, chronic alcoholism, and delirium tremens.

One investigator considers that normal drinkers are those who end up their indulgence in alcohol by going to bed at night. Chronic alcoholics are those to whom a night's sleep is only an unusually long time when they are not drinking. Delirium tremens develops among habitually heavy and consistent users of alcohol.

Delirium tremens as a disease first was described in 1813 by an English physician after observing the condition in sailors who indulged to excess in alcohol during their time ashore.

Apparently the disease is due to an accumulation of fluid in the brain, with resultant convulsions and disorder of the intellect due to the change that has taken place in the tissues of the brain. Not all alcoholics develop delirium tremens.

Since the change in the tissues of the brain is quite definite in most cases, modern methods of treatment are devoted to getting the fluid out of the brain as rapidly as possible.

A new method of treatment, recently described, involves draining off of a certain amount of spinal fluid. This is done by putting a needle into the spinal column and permitting any where from one-twentieth to one-tenth of a pint of the spinal fluid to escape.

In addition, quantities of dextrose solutions are injected directly into the veins, and magnesium sulphate, a form of salts, is given in large doses by mouth.

All this produces a pull on the fluid in the tissues and causes the fluid to pour out through the kidneys and the bowels. At the same time, the amount of fluid that the person with delirium tremens is permitted to take is definitely controlled, the limit being not more than one quart every 24 hours. The patient also is given sedative drugs regularly so that he will remain absolutely quiet, and will sleep during the action of the methods that have been mentioned. Most of the patients with delirium tremens promptly become quiet and tend toward rapid recovery.

Under this treatment there has been a reduction of more than one-half in the percentage of alcoholic deaths in institutions in which this treatment was used.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

We hear so much of the term "anti-social," yet I often wonder if people know precisely what it means. When a child is shy we call him anti-social. If he is incorrigible, it is the same. Indeed anything that is unusual in the child is so indicated, and if he does not fit into a pattern or won't conform to groups, he is instantly dubbed as an anti-social child.

But no one takes the time to explain what it means, or to state that the underlying reasons for one of the above cases is the truth about all. What does it mean to be anti-social, and to refuse to adapt oneself to everyday life and be happy about it?

New I am going to use a big phrase, but it is not hard to understand if we turn the words over a couple of times in our minds. COMPULSION OF PEOPLE. That's it. Compulsion of people. Not particularly being ordered about by people, but just the pressure of everything and everyone about us that expects us to act and fit into life in a way they have chosen for us, and not in the free way we would select for ourselves.

Hermits Flees From Pressure. The hermit escapes to his cave, because he prefers it to having his life cut for him by others. He thinks that even community life is too much of a strain. He is anti-social.

The boy or girl, man or woman who prefers to keep his own company to that of others, who reads constantly or stays alone as much as possible is anti-social. Those who are ill at ease in the presence of others are at heart anti-social, because they suffer from the pressure of standard. It is essentially selfish, not as we know selfishness, but because thought is wrapped in one's central core and cannot be happy doing what others ordain.

The incorrigible child (or the law-blind adult) is the same person. He also resents subconsciously the compulsion-of-living in general. The difference is that he has strength to fight for what he calls his rights and he defies society to keep him down. He cannot be content with the pressure of organized law, or even the everyday rule of those near him. He must be sufficient unto himself. And he gets into trouble.

Routine Sets Respect For Law To be anti-social means that we long for freedom from man, freedom to express ourselves in the way we wish. All of us are affected more or less, depending on our inferiority or lack of confidence. Most bad children are bad because of defense mechanism, although other things enter into it too.

From earliest childhood therefore, two things are necessary to accustom the baby to people and their ways. One is to let him see that people are to be trusted. The other is to get him used at home law in the form of regular routine. He should learn to stand the ways and reasonable compulsions of the world. Then he won't go anti-social on us and be a sad, or a difficult problem later. Once he sets his face away from people, and all they represent, he can't turn back. It is a problem, because humoring and coddling may fix his dislike of anything that interferes, or anyone who comes between him and his comfort. It is the hardest puzzle the parent has to deal with.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—The Penner is mightier than the duck. I mean that Joe Penner is no longer dependent upon Geo-Goo.

Untold millions of parents also will be glad to know that never again, on screen or air, will the comedian exclaim, "You na-s-s-sty man!" or "Don't ever do that!"

Penner stayed off the air and away from Hollywood for a year in the hope that his fans would forget that silly query, "Wanna buy a duck?" They haven't forgotten, for he still gets a lot of fan mail. Nevertheless he's through with ducks forever. "They were drivin' me nuts," admitted Penner.

What he wants to do now is build a new character for himself. He's going to be "The Black Sheep" of the family that he is assembling. He has been thinking up some black sheep catch lines which may grip the world's peculiar fancy as strongly as did the "na-s-s-sty man" business.

So it looks as though mothers and fathers are in for a bad time of it again, and they won't dare say "Bah!" Far From Being Collegiate Penner has a contract calling for three pictures a year. The first one, soon to go into production, will have a cast including Victor Moore, Helen Broderick, and Porky Karkas—pretty distinguished company.

Penner says that hereafter his own comedy will not be so broad and boisterous as it was in his two previous movies, "College Rhythm" and "Collegiate."

All that college stuff was just Hollywood irony so far as Penner was concerned. He hasn't been closer to a classroom than the 50-yard line at a football game.

He was born Joseph Finter in a small town in Hungary, and had a very tough time of it. He sold frogs which he caught in the swamps, and to this day can't bear the sight of frogs' legs. Doesn't relish roast duck, either. And now he's worrying for fear he may develop a distate for mutton.

Gets Rough Handling The Pinters sailed for America when Joe was 9, and moved to Detroit. After a few years of learning English, he began appearing on the amateur bills of theaters. In 1923 he worked as a vaudeville magician's assistant until the night he dropped a robe covering the "Lady Floating in Mid-Air" and revealed the mechanism which supported her.

Then to a burlesque show as second comedian. "Don't worry about your lines," he was told. You'll catch on all right when the show starts." He began on when the first comedian caught battling him all over the stage and ripping the clothes off him. A week of that and he was so black and blue and crippled that they fired him.

A Break at Last! Luck took a turn after that. He got another comic role, with lines to speak, and was a hit. A Broadway scout saw him and Pinter (who was Penner now) landed in a road company of the "Greenwich Village Follies."

Came more shows, and an engagement on the air with Rudy Vallee. Penner was sure he'd be a flop because his clowning had depended on tricks with his hands, face, cigar, and hat. But he did all right, and has been doing very well ever since. The "wanna buy a duck" and other catch phrases which boomed him to the peak of popularity were pure accidents—bits of ad libbing that got a laugh.

And, speaking of laughs, he'll keep that unearthly cackle which has become one of his trademarks.

Penner and Eleanor May Penner (she was a dancer in that first "Greenwich Village Follies") are going to build a big house in the hills, where the climate is fine for everything but ducks.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH HOWARD has been engaged to STEPHEN FOWLER for four years. She wants to be married and keep her job in a business office but Steve will not hear to this.

Judith meets Steve for lunch and they go over the familiar arguments. Judith points out that her friends, VIRGINIA and BOB BENT, are happily married, though both have jobs. Steve refuses to be convinced. Finally Judith threatens to break the engagement.

Steve, suddenly realizing she is in earnest, asks to come to her apartment that evening to talk the matter over.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

DESPITE Virginia's reassurance, Judith found it difficult to stop her sobbing.

"I—I always thought I could be sane about something like this," Judith faltered. "But now I—I'm just realizing what Steve means to me!"

Virginia patted her shoulder. "Sure, I know. But right now you've got to snap out of it. The rest of the girls will be popping in here in a minute, and you can't let them see you like this. Come on, buck up."

Judith nodded. With an effort she straightened and went to the washstand. While Virginia stood guard at the door, Judith bathed her face in cold water. When she had finished, Virginia left the door and stood in front of her. "Now you're all right, Judith. A little powder and some rouge now. And," she dove into her bag, "a cigaret. Here." She inserted the cigaret between Judith's trembling lips, held up a light.

"You're a peach, Virginia."

The other shook her head. "Don't pin any wings on me, darling. I'm enjoying myself. Know why? Because I've looked forward to this break for a long time. It's the most sensible thing you've done in about three years."

"Do you really believe that?" Judith tried to smile.

"I not only believe it, but I know it. Just forget Steve Fowler, and you'll be all right in a month—or less. Never see him again."

"But he's coming to the apartment tonight."

Virginia's mouth fell open. "Coming to the apartment! I thought you were through?"

"I am through," Judith insisted. "But we—we were out there on the sidewalk and Steve said we couldn't just finish it like that. It did seem queer . . . after four years."

FOR a moment Virginia said nothing, but her glance held plenty of meaning. At last she spoke. "Judith, you're a double-barreled shot about that man. Here you get yourself all worked up to a clean break, and then you spoil it."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean you should have left him finally there on the sidewalk. If you see him again, you'll have everything to do over again."

Judith shook her head. "I'm not bluffing, Virginia."

"Of course you're not. But I know what love can do to a gal. All her brains ooze out into her heart, and then anything can happen." She stopped a moment. "Listen, Judith, will you resent it if I help you out of this?"

"Let me be the judge of that. Your only hope is to have other she told herself, "It was only four years . . . and with every hour those four years will grow less important," she could not really believe it.

Judith rose at last, bathed her face in cold water and slipped into a cool frock. She had barely finished dressing when Steve's ring at the door startled her. Listlessly she went to the door and opened it.

"Hello, Steve."

He looked at her closely as he came in, but said nothing. Walking to the little table by the window he put down his hat, took his pipe from his pocket and set it between his teeth unlighted. Then, nervously, he returned it to his pocket.

"Look here, Judith," he said suddenly, "you couldn't have meant what you said this noon."

"I did mean it, though." Her eyes met his unflinchingly.

"Then you haven't changed your mood?" He reached for his hat. "And if you haven't changed your mood there's no use in my trying to talk this out with you now."

"It isn't a mood, Steve—and it isn't a question of talking it out. I told you today how I felt." She took a step toward him, then stopped as if afraid of herself. "Oh, Steve, I haven't insisted many times that I was right. In all the times we've quarreled I've always given in. But this time I'm not going to give in. That's what makes me feel so sure I'm right."

STEVE'S laugh was without humor. "Right? How can you be so absurd, Judith? You want me to marry you, support you, when I can just about manage to do for myself."

"I want you to marry me, Stephen. I'll support myself. I want it that way. Doesn't that make it all right?"

He shook his head. "Judith, I love you. I want you more than anything else in the world. But I'm not going to let it blind me to the fact that I mustn't try to have what I've no right to have. Can't you understand that?"

Judith's shoulders sagged. Her mouth twisted in a smile of helplessness. "Steve, all I know is that you and I are young—and we're in love. That's all there is to know or understand. We won't be young forever. We—we may not love each other forever. But today is ours." She went to him now, her trembling hands against his shoulders. "Can't you understand that, Stephen? Today is ours, and you want us to keep planning for a tomorrow that might never come."

He looked down at her, not speaking. Judith thought: If he kisses me now I'll lose it. If—

"That's the logic of a woman," Steve was saying. "But money's made in a man's world. And it takes money for a happy marriage. I'd be worse than a fool if I saw it your way, Judith."

His arm went around her shoulder, and his head bent closer. Judith, if you'd only believe that I know what I'm talking about. It's your own happiness I'm thinking about. It—

There were three sharp raps on the door, and Virginia Bent's shrill, "Open up in there! It's the house detective!"

The Day Is Done
The day is done, and the darkness
Falls from the wings of night.
As a feather is wafted downward
From an eagle in his flight,
I see the lights of the village
Gleam thru the rain and the mist,
And a feeling of sadness comes o'er me,
That my soul cannot resist,
A feeling of sadness and longing,
That is not akin to pain,
And resembles sorrow only,
As the mist resembles the rain.
Come read to me some poem,
Some simple and heartfelt lay,
That shall soothe this restless feeling,
And banish the thoughts of day,
Not from the grand old masters,
Not from the bards sublime,
Whose distant footsteps echo
Thru the corridors of Time,
Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start,
And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away.

WITH THE LADIES

By Helen Welshimer

The 1936 mother, more than ever before, takes the multiple role of parent, counselor and playmate to her children. And she has fun doing it. She refuses to be relegated to a rocking chair and cap to live vicariously the interests of her growing family. She proves that to be a person, too! That, if you are, your children will have a lot better time with you, and you will save yourself any of the pangs of the martyr complex when Mary marries and goes away, or John takes a job 100 miles from home.

Bridges Gap Between Generations
The annual mother-and-son golf tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, held recently is one of the new evidences of the way in which parents are bridging the gap between generations. When a mother and son have played a game together, taken their victories humbly and their defeats cheerfully, they know something about each other that they couldn't have found out if the mother had stayed on the club house veranda, or stood on the lines and merely watched her son's strokes.

No boy or girl wants his mother to be his age. He feels as ridiculous as she looks, when she makes the attempt. If the added years have not given a woman something of matured sympathy, understanding and dignity, she has failed, and her children are wise enough to know it. If she can not give them the benefit of a widened, deepened experience background, against which to make comparisons and draw conclusions, she has failed. When a boy wants someone who speaks his own language, he'll get someone his own age to do it. He expects something better from his mother.

Friendship Enriches Filial Relationship
Therefore, when a mother proves that without sacrificing one inch of her mental and spiritual growth, she can go around the links with him, in weather fair or foul, and speak the lingo of the game, he realizes that he has drawn something special. There is more than love in such a relationship. There is genuine friendship, an article not always accompanying the birth certificate. Children love their parents, frequently, because they have fun together whether curbing the budget, painting the kitchen cupboard or riding on the ferris wheel.

People—mothers, sons, daughters, and grandsons—come at last to a certain status of independence where they are persons, free to treat each other as such. If the older people have no interests of their own, they may be a drag on the family good nature. Certainly parents should be interested in their children's concern, but it is mighty refreshing when they bring some interests of their own to share with their sons and daughters.

"How can my children look up to me as an oracle if I get out on the golf course and play with them?" a woman may ask.

Establishes Foundation for Real Understanding
How can they thing you understand their game—whatever that game may be—if you've never played it? Why don't they trust your judgment more when they know you've been over the course?

Certainly only a small percentage of women play golf. Few have the time or money to take up the game. That has little to do with our theme. It is that ageless outlook on life and its complexities; that young interpretation, all the younger because its roots go into matured soil, that should concern women. Such things as son-and-mother tournaments and tennis matches are incidental. It is merely that, so long as a son and mother occasionally join forces as equals, they'll come into a healthier, stronger more helpful relationship.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

FIRST TO FLY THE CHANNEL

THE Lindbergh of pioneer aviation, Louis Bleriot, died recently in Paris, aged 64. Twenty-seven years ago, this son of a French manufacturer, already a wealthy engineer and inventor, took the throttle in a crude-like machine that few would dare fly today, and crossed the English channel from Calais to Dover. It was a feat as daring and as historic in 1909 as was Lindbergh's lone crossing of the Atlantic in 1927.

Bleriot started building and flying airplanes in 1906. First by short-hops, then by longer cross-country flights, he distinguished himself in Europe as equally as did the Wright brothers in America. Then, on July 23, 1909, with a French destroyer assigned to "pace" him, he left Calais, outdistanced the warship, and reached Dover, England, a distance of 23.3 miles, in 30 minutes. In 1914, on the 25th anniversary of this pioneering feat, France issued the stamp shown below. It pictures Bleriot's plane crossing the English channel.

Bill Jeffries on Friday Mat Card

Will Meet Pat Newman at South Walnut Street Arena Friday Night

Bill Jeffries, who appeared in the first grappling show in Hope two years ago under the partnership of Mauldin & Moore, will be back Friday night as one of the contestants in the first half of a double main event at the South Walnut street arena. Jeffries came here last week and acted as referee in the Jack Curtis-Leroy McGurk match. Jeffries will exchange holds with Pat Newman of Texarkana, a clever and fast stepping wrestler.

The feature event brings together Frankie Hill of San Jose, Calif., and Ivan Micheloff, veteran Russian. Micheloff is a new comer to Hope fans. Hill is well known to Southwest Arkansans fans.

Both matches are based on two out of three falls and both have two-hour time limits.

The show starts at 8:15.

Okay Team Is to Play Here Sunday

With Record of Ten Straight, Will Play the Hope Lumberjacks

The Okay baseball team, with a victory streak of 10 straight, and the Hope Lumberjacks, winners of 13 out of the last 15 games, clash Sunday afternoon in a double-header at Fair Park.

The first game gets underway at 2:45 with either McDowell or Zinn hurling for Hope. Manager Lloyd Coop was undecided on who would pitch the second game.

McDowell will probably get the call for the first game. He was scheduled to work last Sunday against Barksdale Flyers but developed a sore arm before starting time and remained on the sidelines.

Beard Foretells Decrease

MULLENS, W. Va.—(P)—John Brookman, veteran barber, says that a man's beard foretells his death. He said: "A man's beard just doesn't shave right when he's about to die. I have felt the difference many times and have never missed yet. He can't explain the feeling, but says the beard 'just don't feel right.'"

A Great Drive by New York Giants

Come Up From the Ruck to Grab Leadership of National Loop

By PAP

Associated Press Writer

When the Giants left New York for another swing around the Western loop their loyal supporters were in high glee. For the Giants' surge had carried to within a single game of the league lead. And just about one month ago the Giants were considered hopelessly out of the running as they floundered around in fifth place.

Judging solely by what they have seen of their favorites at home, Giants fans have some grounds for feeling that the team should be in front at this stage of the race. The Giants have won 47 of the 63 games played before home folks this season. If they had traveled at anything like that pace on the road they would be heading the parade. But they did not.

The Giants also boasted a 9-game winning streak when they left the friendly home stand. They had won 11 straight series and in so doing had copped 29 of their last 34 games.

The amazing part of the Giants' drive is that it was staged by the same team which floundered about a few weeks back. There have been no important changes to bolster weak spots. The team simply started to click. That is all there is to it.

Almost as amazing as the Giants' sudden awakening is the support given the team by home fans. The season attendance figure for the Polo Grounds is almost certain to be broken, whether the team wins the pennant or not. On a Tuesday when the Giants engaged Brooklyn in a double-header, 48,672 paid admissions were recorded, a new high for a weekday game. Only the 1936 opening day game, also with the Dodgers, tops that figure this season.

In the mad scramble for a place in the sun the Giants uncovered a potential star in Frank (Great Gabba) Gabler. For months Gabler was barely hanging on to his job. Then suddenly he blossomed out and started winning ball games for Bill Terry. His 12-inning victory over Van Munching and the Brooklyn Dodgers stamped him as a real pitcher.

This fellow can out-talk anyone in the senior circuit—not excepting Dizzy Dean. Gabler begins where Dean winds up. The Great Diz confines his popping off to baseball topics, as a rule, but the Great Gabba's range of subject matter is unlimited. No member of the Giant roster wants to room with him simply because he talks every waking minute. Sometimes, when he really warms up, Gabler chatters through to night in his sleep.

He's A Poet, Too

He spouts poetry, usually of his own composition, and on the slightest provocation unravels fantastic fables that are his brain-children. He readily admits to being a great all-around athlete, and will talk for hours about his accomplishments on the athletic fields. He'll tell you how he ran against Frank Wykoff when he was in high school. And if he detects the slightest incredulity on your part he is as likely as not to drag you to the nearest swimming pool and there give you a demonstration of his accomplishments on the high-diving board.

There isn't a subject in the world he isn't ready and willing to talk on. But, of course, his favorite subject is Frank Gabler. A line drive cracked his skull one afternoon when he was pitching for Kansas City. That may explain a lot of things, but many players, who knew him long before the accident insist that the liner drove some sense into his head and slowed him up a bit.

Casey Stengel had a chance to get Gabler last winter, but decided to pass him up when he learned that the pitcher could and would out-talk him. Casey won't have anyone like that around the Brooklyn ball park.

He is set on having the last word at all times.

Parmelee Loses 1-0 Duel With McFayden of Boston in 10 Innings

ST. LOUIS—(P)—Leroy (Tarzan) Parmelee, Cardinal pitcher, was near fame Thursday but after pitching seven hitless innings against the Bees weakened and Boston won in the tenth, 1 to 0.

It was a pitchers' battle from the first inning, with the veteran Danny McFayden of the Bees allowing only four hits, no more than one in any inning, and Parmelee, last year with the Giants, only three.

The defeat was the fifth straight for the Cardinals and Boston's fourth victory in a row for a sweep of the series.

Al Lopez, singled in the eighth to break the Bees' hitless spell. But it was Joe Coscarart's tenth inning triple, scoring Tony Cuccinello from second, that provided the winning margin. Lopez never got farther than first base. Cuccinello singled through Durocher to start the tenth. Hal Lee sacrificed him to second. Coscarart hit a blow to center field which bounded past Chick Fullis, who had just gone in to replace Lynn King. Cuccinello sped across the plate and Coscarart pulled up at third.

The Beer That Made Milwaukee Famous

Eastern States to Hold Landon's Fate

Republican's Thrust Into East on Speaking Tour Is Crucial Test

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Weeks will elapse before the full effect of Governor Landon's eastern tour is reflected in tangible clarification of sentiment among the voters.

In his first speech at West Middlebury, Pa., he reiterated his belief in the "American way" as opposed to the "New Deal," but he left for later speeches any definite detailing of his program such as he promised earlier.

Supplying wants of the people through private enterprise, he forecast, was the "new frontier" ready to absorb the pressure of unemployment. That it would do so was his forecast. The only program evident in connection with it was assurance that he wanted sufficient curbs upon private enterprise to prevent monopoly and unfair practices.

Emphasizes Neighborliness
Regardless of the contents of subsequent speeches, that first one left many people puzzled as to Governor Landon's plan of attack.

He came riding into the east emanating neighborliness and good will. The corps of advisors on tour with him smacked of the simplicity of the shaded country lane. It might be that his plan is to impress the public in these early stages with his personality. The governor may surmise that the principal pressure for him to go into details about his program this early comes from Democrats who would appreciate any additional time he will give them to prepare counterattacks.

Whatever his plan, the east's first sight of him may prove decisive.

Democrats Charge 'No Program'
Regardless of how fully his program is stated, he will be subjected to attack from Democratic spokesmen eager to accuse him of having no program.

If eastern voters consider his speeches as offering only meager detail of his program, can they be influenced by his "yet-acquainted" tour to suspend judgment until he is prepared to go further into detail?

There are prominent figures in both parties who, differing with Senator Couzens of Michigan, have declared continuation of the New Deal would menace the American style of government.

Many others, particularly those professing to speak for certain farm and labor groups, fear that defeat of the New Deal and any restoration of "the order" would incite dangerous unrest.

All of these must consider the Landon tour into the east a most fateful journey.

There is no scientific basis for the theory that men's brains are better than women's, according to Soviet scientists.

Spanish Rebels Who Refused to be Captured Alive

Preferring death at their own hands to the ordeal of capture and the inevitable firing squad, officers of the rebellious Fascist regiments committed suicide when they no longer were able to resist the assault of Loyalist troops on the Montagna Barracks in Madrid. Their conquerors inspect the bodies of suicides sprawled in the barracks' patio.

Night Clubs Lose Gomez for Yanks

Failure of Many Pitching Staffs Is Conspicuous This Season

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service
NEW YORK—New York Yankees proved their worth this season by virtually clinching the American League pennant with little help from Vernon Gomez, one of the highest salaried slingers in the league.

The St. Louis Cardinals have struggled along without Paul Dean, thanks largely to the heroic efforts of his irreplaceable brother, Dizzy.

Hal Schumacher and Fred Fitzsimmons were hampered by bad arms for quite a spell, but there are the New York Giants coming from behind for a change.

Other stars of 1935 who have been disappointing to various degrees this trip are Paul Derringer of the Reds, Cy Blanton of the Pirates, Lon Warneke of the Cubs, Ted Lyons of the White Sox, Bob Grove and Wesley Ferrell of the Red Sox, Willis Hudlin and Mel Harder of the Indians, Schoolboy Rowe and Elden Auker of the Tigers, and Johnny Broaca of the Yankees.

Gomez perhaps is the most annoying example of the array of fading mound satellites. Having earned a two-season agreement at $200,000 per cent of the strength of his phenomenal 1934 record of 26 victories and only five defeats, the Castilian southpaw evidently proceeded to acquire an unsatisfactory desire for night life. Gomez turned in only a dozen victories as against 15 reverses in 1935.

Gomez Night League Star
At the age of 25, the Californian was slipping so fast this season that the management saw fit to put coppers on his tail in order to get the frazzled slinger in bed before daylight.

When Gomez, who weighs under 150 pounds, first joined the Rupperts he spent off-seasons building himself up in his native wild and woolly west. He has neglected to do this since reaching the more important money class and the results are obvious. With the expiration of his contract this fall, it is a leapfrog pinch that Gomez will get no fat salary agreement for next year.

Lefty says that there is nothing wrong with his arm, but the careful Colonel Ruppert won't shell out until he gets value received.

Looking at the Cardinals, especially their pitching, you get the idea that Frankie Frisch must do it with mirrors. Naturally, Dizzy Dean carries the nod. The Great One made his task harder this season by prevailing upon Brother Paul to hold out with him last spring. Paul bore down too soon after too little spring training, and has been a washout since the early weeks of the campaign.

One reason why the Giants now are favored by many to give New York a 5-cent world series this autumn is that the array remained within striking distance during the time that both Schumacher and Fitzsimmons were handicapped by sore arms.

Derringer Has Difficulties
Main problem before the house in Cincinnati Red circles today is not the production of an infielder to replace Capt. Billy Myers, but how to get Dealer Derringer back on the victory path. The large right-hander hasn't had much luck since he trimmed the Cubs at Crosley Field in a night game, June 29. Instead of being the trail blazer for the Reds in their drive to sew up a first division berth, Derringer has been the anchor which has held them in the lower straits.

On his 1935 record of 22 victories and 14 defeats and defensive average of .751 earned runs for each nine innings, Derringer figured to pace this year's staff and take the Reds up the ladder if given some help. The help arrived, and up to the end of June he was doing that very thing. Then he hit the skids.

What to do about Derringer is the question in the Rhineland. It has been suggested that Charley Drensen send him to Toronto. That worked with St. Johnson, who returned to be a winner for the Cards.

When owners investigate ball players who fall before the natural period of deterioration, they frequently find that the fault is not mechanical. Derringer had nutritional difficulties.

A ball player has to keep his mind on the game.

Major Role His in Press Strike

Dave Beck, above, president of the Teamsters' Union Council, and long a power in Seattle and northwest labor and political affairs, is credited with a leading role in the American Newspaper Guild strike against Hearst's Seattle Post-Intelligencer. Members of Beck's organization joined striking editorial department workers in mass picketing which forced the newspaper plant to close.

Roosevelt Faces

veit's urgent behest, to enhance the chances of the national ticket. But he must run without the active support—and perhaps with the tacit opposition—of Al Smith, the old friend to whose own gubernatorial campaigns Lehman used to contribute gobs of money and who heretofore has supported Lehman wholeheartedly as a candidate for governor.

Tammany is said to be willing, for the most part, to see Lehman defeated. He hasn't been as friendly as Tammany would have liked.

And there are some evidences of an effort to drive a wedge between the "Irish vote" and the "Jewish vote," the latter of which will be practically unanimous for Lehman.

Despite all the Democratic hand-caps, however, New York is a doubtful state and there will be a fight for it right up to the last gun.

Nobody knows yet whom the Republican convention will nominate to oppose Lehman.

Mayor R. B. Marvyn of Syracuse and his fellow citizens, George Fearon, party leader in the state senate, may kill each other off (Fearon is now leading in their contest for the nomination), in which case colorful and able Judge William F. Bleagley of Yonkers probably will be nominated.

Republicans Face Big Task
It will be surprising if Lehman doesn't win. The Republican candidate won't be nominated until Sept. 22, which leaves little time for campaigning and buildup. On the other hand, Democratic governors can be elected in years when the presidential candidate meets defeat.

Smith was elected in 1924 when John W. Davis was defeated and Al well remembers that the state elected Franklin Roosevelt governor in 1928, but refused to give Al its electoral vote for president that year for Roosevelt, according to all reports. So will Jimmy Walker, which should be a help in the city. Organized labor leaders are putting on a hot campaign to get out the vote for Roosevelt.

There's hopeful New Deal talk of 250,000 or more voters for Roosevelt who never took the trouble to vote before. Father Coughlin's remarks concerning Jews helped the national ticket in New York.

Ernie Clee for Democrats
Worries of the Democratic high command aren't shared by all, either. Some insist that this election will be out of the political hands that in the assembly elections of 1935, when Tammany was relatively inactive and Republicans stressed the New Deal issue, the people of the metropolis registered and flocked to the polls in tremendous numbers to vote Democratic.

According to this theory, the "man on the street" is aroused and will come to bat for Roosevelt without be-

Roads Last Longer If Given "Rest"

Where Traffic Quits at Night Concrete Pavement Lasts Longer

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)
ITHACA, N. Y., (AP)—That concrete highway can rest and regain their strength when traffic is light is demonstrated in tests at Cornell university.

In these tests, square bars of concrete to the thickness of pavement and several feet long are subjected to poundings like those from heavy traffic until they break. This reveals the practical strength of various mixtures and thicknesses.

Highway concrete is slightly elastic. It bends and stretches a bit under the weight of a passing vehicle. These traffic flexions in the concrete are reproduced in the Cornell laboratory. Heavy Traffic Hardest

If each stress is not more than half of the force necessary to break the bar, the concrete will stand six to seven million stresses before it breaks. But if the individual stresses reach two-thirds or three-quarters of the concrete's breaking strength, the material will stand only 200,000 to 300,000 of them.

The ability of the concrete to "rest" is shown by interrupting the stress machine from time to time. Some initial stresses, if continued long enough, will cause a drop of about 40 per cent in the concrete's tensile strength. That is, a weight 40 per cent less than required at first would break the concrete.

Value of Rest Demonstrated
But if the stress is stopped for awhile and the concrete given a complete rest from pressure, it recovers its original tensile strength.

No such recovery occurs, however, if the concrete has been overstrained.

Failed in Past
Another solid fact is that no party based on the interests of any single class—even when that class was united—has ever gone far or lived long in American political history.

Sensing this, perhaps, most of the leaders at the Washington conference spoke of a "liberal" party, rather than a "labor" party. But the inference was very plain that such a party would be organized in the interest of labor, and would be dominated by labor. The distinction, as it was outlined by the labor leaders themselves, was one of name rather than purpose.

If the definition were expanded, however, new uncertainties would arise. Is it to be supposed that a new "liberal" party, organized by labor, could enlist and dominate such existing groups as the farmer-labor party, the La Follette progressive party, and the Lemke-Coughlin-Townsend union party?

Which leads up to perhaps the solid fact of all: that the organization of an effective political party always has proved exceedingly difficult under the most favorable of conditions, and always has failed when the elements involved were at loggerheads among themselves.

Theodore Roosevelt tried it and failed. The elder Robert M. La Follette tried it and failed, even though he had the endorsement of the federation of labor. John L. Lewis and his colleagues are strong men, indeed, if they can try it and succeed.

The first of these is that maximum results scarcely could be expected of a labor party unless labor were united behind it. Today labor is anything but united. A very large percentage is unorganized, and manifestly out of sympathy with that percentage which is organized. And the organized section is split in the bitterest schism in its history.

The Washington meeting at which the idea of a 1940 independent party was most prominently projected was herded to the polls by Tammany. And Tammany has so many important local political contests of its own that it can't afford to "lie down" this year.

It is also true that Democratic political bosses in the boroughs outside Manhattan—Ed Flynn of the Bronx, Jim Sheridan of Queens, and Frank Kelly of Brooklyn—will stand by Roosevelt.

The fight in New York between Landon and Roosevelt may be so close, in fact, that it will be decided by the trends of the next few weeks. (Copyright, 1936, NEA Service, Inc.)

That is, overloading it too much beyond the 40 per cent limit leaves the concrete permanently weakened. In this respect movement is like the human constitution.

In practice this means that highways on which traffic virtually stops at night, may not need to be quite as good in tensile strength as similar roads with 24-hour traffic.

Animals are much more sensitive to an electric shock than human beings, one of 20 volts being dangerous to cattle and horses.
